

Nathania Atkinson

OVERVIEW

Nathania is a creative entrepreneur, cultural producer, creative director, university guest lecturer, PhD researcher and diversity & inclusion consultant.

Nathania's professional career began on the stage as a contemporary trained dancer before evolving into non-profit arts and community organisation founder, artist development, international creative agency founder specialising in artist/innovator development, costume designer and line producer for award winning short and feature films, artistic director spanning music videos, editorials, fashion shows, brand campaigns, international panellist and producer of heritage documentaries.

HIGHLIGHTS

Nathania is a qualified illex paralegal, youth worker and NLP practitioner,. As a creative facilitator, entrepreneur consultant and support worker she has been commissioned to work with numerous government, corporate and independent organisations.

- ❖ Nathania is currently pursuing a PHD with specialist areas of gender, race and lack of diversity and visibility with cultural industry talent, professional skill employment and mobility.
- ❖ As a specialist her role includes consulting with clients, partners and affiliates with research, trends and the representation of BAME, female talent and creative professionals.
- ❖ Nathania has a background in professional practice and academia - showcased in university lecturing, having taught criminology for 5 years as well as the 1st Black Studies degree in the UK.
- ❖ Nathania is the founder of Her House of Mastery – an interdisciplinary creative hub creating an independent space for like-minded influencers to come together and contribute to change and development.